OTHER SOURCES OF LEGAL FORMS

Forms are not limited to formbooks. Many substantive treatises contain forms applicable to practice in that area. Continuing education seminar publications often contain forms relating to the topics of the seminar. The Law Library subscribes to the ALI-ABA Course Materials Journal, which frequently contains forms.

WebVoyage, the library's computer catalog, can be used to find forms. A Keyword search, using the topic (for example, "Estate Planning") and the word "forms," may turn up materials containing forms.

FINDING FORMS ON THE INTERNET

FedForms.gov (www.forms.gov) contains many, but not all, of the forms issued by Federal agencies. It also provides links for finding tax forms and small business forms.

Findforms.com (www.findforms.com) contains links to a number of sites offering both drafting and pleading and practice forms. Most sites do not charge for forms. Findforms.com also allows searching for State and Federal forms.

Forms for Idaho state courts can be found on the Idaho State Judiciary website at www.isc.idaho.gov. This site has links to a Court Rules Forms Page (with Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure and Idaho Criminal Rules Forms), the Court Assistance Offices Forms Page, and an Other Court Forms link with various sample forms and a link to the Idaho Child Protection Manual and Forms page.

Forms for use in Snake River Basin Adjudications can be found on www.srba.state.id.us. The number of forms on this site is limited.

For forms for use in the U.S. District Courts in Idaho go to www.id.uscourts.gov. This page includes links to Bankruptcy forms, District Court forms, and Miscellaneous forms (Pro Hac Vice Admission and Fax Filing Cover Sheet).

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit has 10 forms available on its website at www.ca9.uscourts.gov. The website posts a disclaimer informing users that these forms are to be used as “Samples Only” and they are not to be submitted to the court in their present form.

The Court Assistance Office Project provides a number of forms and instructions (http://www.courtselfhelp.idaho.gov/overview_new.asp). Most forms are related to Family Law issues such as divorce, paternity, custody, and domestic violence.

The Idaho Industrial Commission posts Workers Compensation forms on their website at www.iic.idaho.gov. These include forms for Claims, Crime Victims, Adjusters, Employers, Attorneys and Pro Se, Surety, Rehabilitation, and Records Requests.
